

Song for Two Ladies

dont know how the Lady do it but sure am glad she do the way she play 'dat saxophone like bushes burning in you never saw nothin like it the way she calls their hiding hearts they hear

they gape

they start

they turn aside from the cheap tricks music hides
they hear,

they hear,

they exult!

"I will turn aside
and see this great sight!
Hear the way
the Lady make 'em play sure chase the blues away" (yeah and between you and the wall and me she was even doin that thing in '73 but the discoduds couldn't hear and the macho men knew fear and hoped she'd go away but she didn't she didn't she didnt) here that sax go on an' wail it called

Free at last

Song for a Blues Singer Dead in Durham, 1981

She was a left brain baby, but she's all right now yeah, she was a left brain baby
but she's all right now she don't forget

she' not there yet

but she's going right now she was a left wing rowdy, but she's alright now catching more with vinegar than honey

yeah, no up tight now

Ask her how she did it, say she just pray

but she dont know how she was a right-wing watchter but there's mailing list now she used to read all the papers but she plays a trump card now dont know why she does it but she does

and it's all right now sure share the blame away
